Call for Papers Doctoral Stream

TPAC/PAC Conference
University of Liverpool, 9th-11th June, 2014

Invitation

The Public Administration Committee is this year holding its annual conference in collaboration with the US Teaching Public Administration Conference. As part of the event, and following on from last May's Postgraduate Conference at Aston University, we wish to encourage the attendance and participation of doctoral students in the field of public administration.

We invite papers from doctoral students on any theme related to the broad disciplines of public administration, management and policy. The stream will be an opportunity to present research in its early stages, to report on progress in your fieldwork or to deliver a more developed paper outlining your emerging findings.

To maximise the value of the conference and the doctoral stream, we will be asking participants to submit papers in advance. In return, we will undertake to read your papers and to provide detailed and constructive feedback in a supportive environment.

Paper Proposals

Please submit an outline of your paper (no more than 500 words) to Dr Mike Rowe (mikerowe@liv.ac.uk) by Friday 28th February, 2014.

Bursaries

In addition to the reduced conference fee for doctoral students, we will also be offering additional financial support where you are unable to secure the full support of your institutions. We would ask you to submit a request, outlining:

- your research.
- the progress you have made.
- how the symposium might contribute to the development of your research.
- the current funding for your studies and existing support for conference attendance.
- the costs you need help with and the amount you are looking for.

These should be submitted to Dr Mike Rowe (mikerowe@liv.ac.uk) by Friday 4th April, 2014.
